ABOUT INNOFEST

Innofest was conceived as a celebration of innovation. Organised in Bangalore by iSpirt, the event featured a innovators zone, power panels, and interactive 'townhall' sessions with the founders of high-profile startups Practo, JnMobi, RedBus, Portea Medical, FreeCharge and PayTM. Hyderabad is the second city to host Innofest Hyd anchored by H4I and supported by HH, HE & Hysea/TIE

Idea being to showcase innovation, which is one of three parts of a startup ecosystem: entrepreneurship (TIE Schools, events like TIECon & Augustfest enable this), products (MNC product companies, large product companies, product management for a and ofcourse startups in tech products space) and innovation (new ideas, creative products, offbeat use of technology).

BRIEF REPORT

P. Gurulingam attended a two-day workshop on Big Data and HADOOP at VNR VJIET, Bachupalli, Haderabad, on 27th and 28th nov 2015. Big Data is the latest technology to process and analyses large volumes of structured, unstructured and semistructured data quickly. Traditional databases are not able to process unstructured data. This drawback of the tredational databases is filled by the Big Data. Hadoop contains some tools such as pig, oozie, hive etc. . These tools are used to process and analyse data. Hortonworks organization integrated these tools and developed Hortonworks_Sandbox to process and analyse data. Hortonworks_Sandbox works on Windows platform. We can upload data files in to HortonWorks_Sandbox and process it by writing queries.

About the University

Jawaharlal Nehru Technological University, the first Technological University to be set up in India, was established on 2 October 1972 in Andhra Pradesh with headquarters in Hyderabad. After a successful existence spanning over 36 years, JNTU was divided into four different Universities. Jawaharlal Nehru Technological University Hyderabad (JNTUH) is one of the four. JNTUH College of Engineering Hyderabad (JNTUHCEH) is the oldest and largest constituent unit of JNTUH. Other constituent colleges of JNTUH are located in Jagityal, Manthani and Sultanpur. In addition, there are 11 other Academic Units situated in JNTUH campus, Hyderabad.

The Department of Humanities and Social Sciences

The Department was first instituted in 1965 in the JNTUH's mother institution, the erstwhile Nagarjunasagar Engineering College. It acquired independent status as the Department of Humanities and Social Sciences in 1979, emerging as a full-fledged department. Today it is equipped with state-of-the-art Multimedia English Language and Communication Skills Laboratories. It was instrumental in introducing English labs Courses in the curriculum of B.Tech I/IV and III/IV. The Department also introduced a Soft Skills Course in all M.Tech Programs in JNTUH CEH. It has taken a giant leap in classroom education with the introduction of an integrated Dual Degree Program (IDP), a 5-year B.Tech & MBA program which equips students with engineering as well as managerial skills.

About the Workshop

JNTUH also has the distinction of being the first University to introduce a course on "Gender Sensitization" for B.Tech/B.Pharm students. It will be taught in the second year, second semester. This is a 'Lab Course' with 02 credits and 03 periods of workload per week. It will be taught to all the branches of Engineering and Pharmacy from the Academic Year 2015-2016. This initiative is based on the directions of the State Government and UGC. In this regard, the book "Towards a World of Equals: A Bilingual Textbook on Gender" was recommended as the course book and as essential reading. This Workshop is designed to refresh teachers' knowledge about Gender Studies and introduce them to classroom practices advocated for teaching the course effectively.

Objectives

1. To introduce teachers to the course on "Gender Sensitization" for which the book Towards A World of Equals: A Bilingual Textbook on Gender has been prescribed.
2. To familiarize teachers with the course
  - > content (printed and audio-visual);
  - > philosophy;
  - > pedagogic principles; and
  - > suggested classroom methods and strategies.
3. To clarify doubts and attend to any questions teachers may raise.

⇒ Since it is an Interdisciplinary Course, Resource Persons to teach this subject can be drawn from the fields of English Literature or Sociology or Political Science or any other qualified faculty who has expertise in this field.

Registration

Teachers may register for the Workshop by sending duly filled in Registration Form along with the prescribed fee of Rs. 500/- to be paid by Demand Draft (DD) drawn in favor of The Principal, JNTUHCEH - TEQIP-II on or before 26 November 2015. Abstract— This paper proposes a fuzzy controlled integrated speed – sensorless approach for the speed control of Brushless DC Motor (BLDCM). This speed sensorless approach employs a load observer to estimate the disturbed load torque, and thus develops a speed sensorless algorithm. For the load observer, the inputs are mechanical rotor inertia constant and the friction coefficient, which are estimated using the recursive least-square rule. Thus this approach is insensitive to motor parameter variations and integrated drift problem. The proposed algorithm is simple when compared to extended Kalman filter in estimating the speed. A comparison is made among fuzzy controller, modified model reference adaptive control and PI controller. It is found that the fuzzy controller has superior performance over the other two controllers. The proposed scheme is simulated using MATLAB/SIMULINK.

I. INTRODUCTION

Recent investigations of AC motor controls have been based on two motor drive frame works – Vector control and Direct torque control. The former, using axes transformation from the three phase electric terminal axis and some control algorithms, controls the motor in a simple environment, and involves more complex computing algorithms compared to the later. The later, without the inner current loop, controls the motor using switching table at the desired torque and flux, but exhibits a ripple speed response, even though its drive framework is simpler than that of the former. This study adapts the vector control motor drive to develop a new speed sensorless vector control for a Brushless DC Motor (BLDCM).

The BLDCM is same as the permanent magnet synchronous motor. However, the former name refers to the driving method, and later refers to structure. The BLDCM has been extensively used in industry because it has high power density, large torque and high efficiency. One of its shortcomings is the need for sensors to support position or speed feedback control, such as an encoder or resolver. These sensors add to the cost and weight of motor drive and reduce the reliability of the system. Research on speed – sensorless control of BLDCM, based on estimating the position or speed of rotor by making measurements at the input terminals has been conducted to solve these problems. Studies in this field can be grouped into three categories:

- 1) Back EMF based approaches [1], [2]
- 2) State observer based approach [3] – [5]
- 3) Estimator based approach [6], [7]

First two methods are sensitive to both the time-variant motor parameters and the integrator drift problem that arises in measuring process. Estimator based approach, which is used an estimator such as the extended Kalman filter to estimate the speed, require complex computing algorithms and suffer from the initial-value problem. Additionally they can only be applied if a high performance PC or DSP is available.

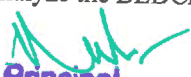

The torque observer [8] was employed as feed forward compensator for the position controller. The torque observer was derived from mechanical dynamic equation with estimated parameters namely the mechanical rotor inertia constant and friction co-efficient. Based on this approach the paper proposes a new speed sensorless approach, which has simpler computing algorithm and is uninfluenced by the time variant motor parameters or the integrator drift problem.

The performance of speed-sensorless approach is governed by the type of controller. For better performance, MMRAS, an adaptive control algorithm is used for the speed controller. The performance of speed controller influences the speed sensorless approach. Therefore modified model reference adaptive system (MMRAS) [11], an adaptive controller algorithm is used in speed control of BLDCM to improve the performance of the speed sensorless approach [9]. In this paper fuzzy controller is being employed in place of MMRAS.

II. SPEED-SENSORLESS TECHNIQUE

Synchronously rotating reference frame (d-q axis) of the vector control drive is adapted here to analyze the BLDCM.

MMRAS is designed to force the plant output to the desired output, enhancing the effect of speed control and improving the performance of speed-sensorless technique.

III. PROPOSED FUZZY LOGIC CONTROLLER

A fuzzy controller is suitable for complex and nonlinear systems. An effort is made to implement the fuzzy controller. In the proposed controller there are two inputs, which are speed error and change in speed error and one output, which is current.

There are seven membership functions both in input and output, in that five are triangular and two are trapezoidal membership functions. These linguistic variables of membership functions are denoted by negative large (NL), negative medium (NM), negative small (NS), zero (ZE), positive small (PS), positive medium (PM), positive large (PL).

The following figures show the membership functions for speed error, change in speed error and current.

4. Plot of membership function for speed error

5. Plot of membership function for change in speed error

IV. SIMULATION RESULTS

The simulation is performed in MATLAB environment. Fig. 3. represents the simulation block diagram of sensorless speed control of BLDCM. First, the parameters J and B are estimated using RLS rule, estimated parameters, J and B are used in torque observer to establish the sensorless algorithm.

In the second step, sensorless algorithm is being implemented with PI, MMRAS and fuzzy speed controller. The simulated results are presented in Fig. 7. Fig. 8. and Fig. 9. respectively. Table I shows the average root mean square error (RMSE) of the sensorless BLDCM Simulation with various controllers. The results reveal that new sensorless algorithm with fuzzy controller is effective.
